WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Windy, Unsettled, Wet Weather Returning Late Sunday Into Early Next Week

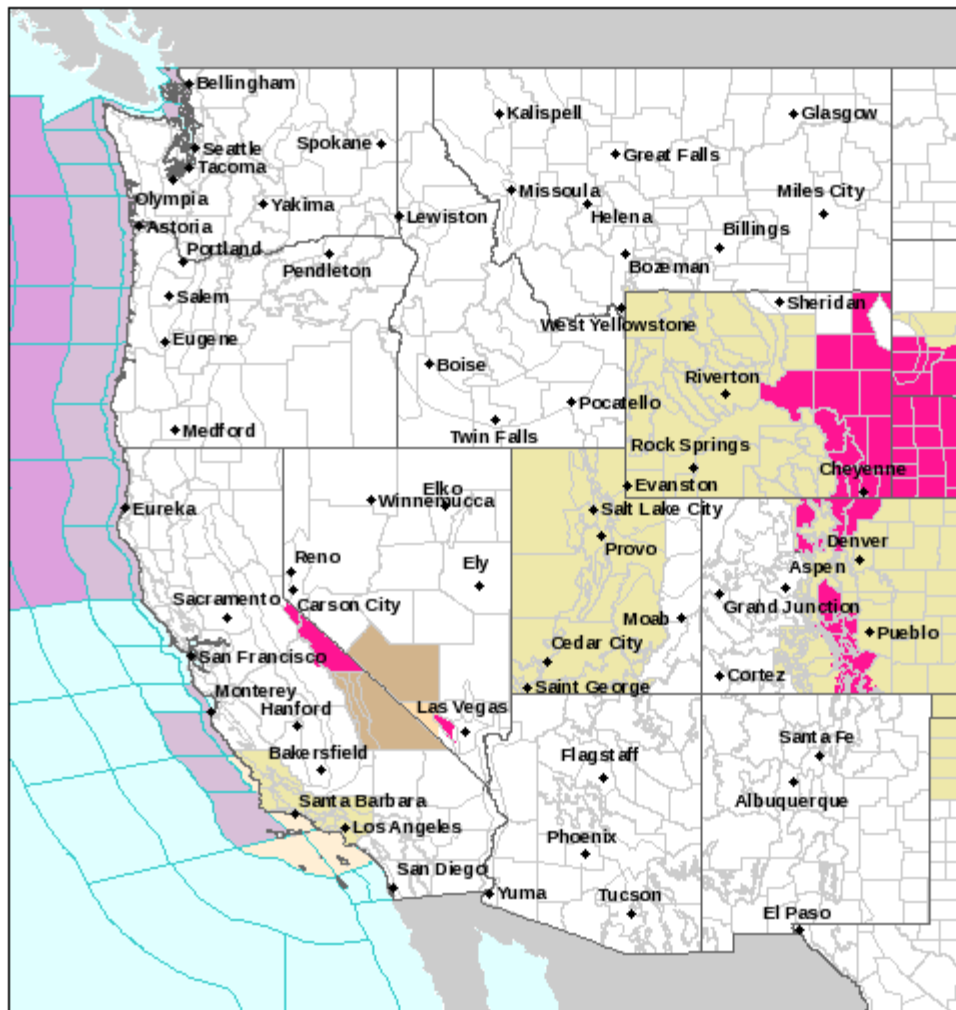

A low pressure trough in the eastern Pacific will produce mild and dry conditions with variable high cloudiness across most of Northern California through early Sunday. Later on Sunday a stronger front will approach the coast. Afternoon S winds will gust to 20-30 mph in open areas and gusts in the most wind-prone areas like Weed may reach 40 mph. Winds will be stronger Sunday night and Monday. South to southeast gusts over the ridges and peaks of the northern coastal range to near Weed will reach 40-50 mph. Light to moderate rain will reach the north coast late in the day and spread inland overnight through early Tuesday. Most areas will see wetting rain from this system, with the exception of far eastern and southern areas where little to no rain may fall. Snow levels will be 6000 feet or higher. The front and rain will pull back to the coastal areas late Tuesday through Thursday, while other areas remain partly cloudy and breezy. Late on Thursday a Pacific low pressure system will approach Central California. A few showers will spread into Northern California Thursday night and Friday. Another strong front will reach the north coast Saturday with rain and gusty south winds.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Pacific trough dropping down the West Coast will bring around 5 degrees of cooling each day through Monday. Maximum temperatures will be in the upper 60s and 70s across the mountains and 80s to low 90s in the valleys today. Minimum humidity will be in the single digits and teens across Southern California and between 15% and 30% across Central California today. Minimum humidity will increase to 15% to 30% across the entire region Sunday and then be above 30% Monday. This trough will also bring scattered showers to Southern California Sunday and Monday and to the Sierra Monday. Most locations will receive less than a quarter inch of rainfall. Southerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the mountain ridges and desert passes this afternoon through Monday night. A weak ridge of high pressure will bring slight warming and a little lower humidity to the region Tuesday and Wednesday. A couple of Pacific storms will bring periods of rain to the area Thursday through next weekend. At this time, it looks as though the entire region will receive significant rainfall from both of these storms. There will be strong south to west winds mainly across the mountains and deserts Thursday afternoon through next weekend.
